ANNOUNCEMENT

MR. SPEAKER. —

I have received a message from Her Majesty the Queen, Head of the Commonwealth inconnection with the Commonwealth Day which was observed on 13th March, 1989. The message is as follows

COMMONWEALTH DAY reminds us year by year of all that our unique association of nations stands for and does Many Commonwealth activities are of value chiefly to the members themselves But we also form a distinctive element in a world which grows more and more inter dependent and which more than ever needs tolerance and co-operation to deal successfully with its problems.

Perhaps nothing during the past year has under-lined this inter dependence more forcefully than the dramatic growth in our awareness of the serious dangers to the environment posed by mans own activities. The threat to the environment takes many forms, of which some are so far-reaching that it is difficult to grasp them. We hear, for example of the possibility of radical changes in our climate leading, among other things, to a rise in the sea level. with all that that would mean for small islands and low-lying regions.

The Commonwealth has a particular part to play in facing up to such issues as these. A concern for the resources we share in common means partnership not only across the oceans but also between generations. A recognition of what our predecessors have bequeathed to us increases our responsbility to transmit these gifts unspoilt to the future inhabitants of our planet.

Our concern to safeguard long-term prospects for our children and their childern does not conflict at all with the pressing need to come to grips with the problem of the present like, poverty, illiteracy, disease, unemplayment and under development. Rather the present and the future are brought together and linked by our efforts to deal with all of these problems together in a realistic way. We must all pray that diminished political tension, particularly among the world's great powers, will provide opportunities for better international co-operation and swifter progress in dealing with environmental, political and economic problems within the Commonwealth and beyond.
